

Abstract

A method for estimating the factor and interaction effects for gene expression microarray experiments is disclosed. The method requires the inversion of two square matrices of size p and p' , respectively, instead of a matrix of size q where $q \gg p \approx p'$. The invention also includes implementation of the methods in computer software, computer readable media comprising these software instructions, and computer systems for performing the methods.